China All Access expands business in application solutions for energy transmission and safe production monitoring

Communication network monitoring and traffic regulation solution become new growth drivers in the future

[19 January 2010, Hong Kong] CHINA ALL ACCESS (HOLDINGS) LIMITED (“China All Access” or the “Company”, HKEx Stock Code: 633), an integrated information communication application solution provider and application service provider in the PRC, has expanded its wireless data application solutions into new areas of energy transmission and safe production monitoring. Network monitoring and traffic regulation business is also expected to be the new growth drivers for the Company.

Wireless data communication application solution has developed rapidly through marketing promotions in 2009. With growing popularity of clean energy usage in China, such as natural gas, safety transmission of energy has become more important. In view of this, the company has expanded its wireless data application solutions business to remote surveillance of natural gas pipeline network and data transmission of wireless meter, in order to capture the rising business opportunities. On the other hand, Chinese government trends to enforce more stringent supervision on safe production, especially the regulation on coal mining. The coal mining industry is required to implement real-time supervision towards mining and production environment to ensure safety. This also provides the company with new market opportunities on wireless data application solutions business.

With the popularity of 3G telecom networks in China, mobile users are having much higher standard for the qualities of mobile communication network. To ensure normal operations of networks, communication operators have strengthened their supervisions towards facilities and network stabilization. Thus, China All Access is developing its business in this area actively, aiming to foster a new business growth for wireless data application solutions business. Besides, China plans to implement “National Transportation Safety Science and Technology Action Plan” shortly to ensure public transportation safety. China All Access’ traffic offence electronic ticketing and payment solution strongly accords with government requirements due to its high-tech and practical qualities. The market promotion and application of China All Access’ traffic offence electronic ticketing and payment solution achieved rapid development and will provide enormous business opportunities through expanding its applications in various provinces and cities in China.

Mr. Shao Kwok Keung, Chief Executive Officer and Executive Director of China All Access said, "Our wireless data application solution has turned numbers of new wireless applications into realities, and contributed widely in areas of city water supply, electric power supply, natural gas supply, traffic offence supervision and payment as well as safe production monitoring. The solution has an obvious advantage in the communication and connection of terminal devices. We believe that the wireless data application solution will become the key implication of the new concept of 'Internet of Things'."
